

Back Yard Exhibit

“If it was a snake it woulda bit ya.” This phrase evokes the idea that I plan to put into visual context in this exhibition entitled Back Yard. The amount of visual information that a person takes in is staggering. The internet, television, and advertisements shape what we pay attention to, and therefore what we deem important. My goal is to bring a few things to light that lay in my back yard that I might generally overlook. There is every level of joy, despair, beauty, and pain that we do not see simply because we do not look. I am challenging myself and the viewer of my work to see some things that are not obvious, but relevant none the less.
